

WINTER 24/25 SNOW COLLECTION

“From the first storm to the final day of the season, our community grows wider and the fire burns brighter.”

As temperatures drop and leaves change, we rejoice in the rituals of an oncoming season. The promise of deep days and après sessions fill our souls. While the mere seconds of that pow turn ignites the fire in you, it's the pursuit and the celebration that stoke the burn for extended periods.

The 2425 Winter season draws its inspiration from those special moments that eventually last a lifetime of memories.

It's why we exist and are continually hungry for more. For the past 32 years, I've been chasing these fleeting instants alongside adventurers, wanderers, nomads and complete strangers. What started as a close-knit circle has grown into a thriving global community. From the first storm to the final day of the season, our community grows wider and the fire burns brighter.

Cheers to another year of storm chasing and sharing the stoke of being outside.

Love and peace,

Michael Akira West

A Conversation with Artist Lukas Goller

“The skateboarding and snowboarding artworks I do represents the part of my art that is more free and the one where I don’t have any constraints.”

Beyond the obvious reverse of your name, is there any meaning to your IG handle: sakulrelog?

No, not at all. I've logged myself in to Insta with this joke about pretending to stay anonymous by writing my name backwards, while fully knowing the inescapable reality of algorithms and AI. Weird humor. Then I've just forgot to change it from there.

So, how did your art end up on Gigi's new ATV jacket?

When one of his old sponsors ended their snow program, Gigi was without a clothing sponsor and had a lot of jackets and pants left, so he asked me if I could help him up-cycle them with some art pieces. I ended up doing some with stencil art and most of them by silkscreen printing, helping his joy for the shred.

How do you and Gigi know each other?

We've known each other for quite a while, I think it's more than two decades. We have always shared good talks about the artsy side of the snowboarding and skateboarding environment. We shared a couple of trips together while filming for Pirate Movie Productions and each one was filled with a lot of laughter.

Does creating art feel similar to you as creating “art” while riding a board previously?

What unites snowboarding and the art world is that you can approach them with a non-competitive way if you like to do so. I think I had chosen to skateboard and snowboard to escape the competition side of skiing, which was prominent in my childhood. It felt like you could invent your own rules for how to approach the learning part of it. For a similar reason, I have chosen art because of the less competitive environment. I think my lack of dancing skills made me snow and skateboard for a big part too, I had to dance at least somewhere, I guess. The same goes for art. Although now snowboarding time is more like erasing or resetting my thoughts I stock up while trying to do art.

Where does the inspiration for the Dunes art come from?

It comes from the inspiration of 17th/18th century woodcarving art like early Dürer and Gustave Doré, 90's skateboarding illustrations (Mark McKee, Sean Cliver, Todd Bratrud, Gorm Boberg, Andy Howell...) and my high school education in surveying. We had to draw a lot of contour lines by hand. So now I'm stuck with this subtle unconscious conditioning of seeing my environment through parametric subdivisions. The Dunes art comes from a piece I did 6-years ago. Later, I did a pattern out of it to print on clothes someday. Working in a silkscreen printing shop I did a lot of allover prints, so I prepared the pattern for that. Then Gigi came along with the idea for his jacket, and it seemed like a perfect fit.

Is it hard to create art that lives on a 3-dimensional, moving object like a jacket vs. a flat canvas or wall?

I don't think the 3d vs 2d aspect is the paradigm which differs from a 2d art piece to a 3d fashion or moving piece let's say. It is easier to create an art piece in 2d because it can stand alone without having the judgement of the market. It just needs a viewer. No viewer - no art. On a produced clothing piece, the approach is way more nuanced and subtle: it must look elegant, pop out, and be simple simultaneously to last through time. When you buy a Gore-Tex Pro jacket you will have it for a long time and go on liking it through the years if its design is timeless. It must stand out and be elegant at the same time. That's a nice equation to solve. It somehow is a pattern that's a fusion between a normal camo and a dazzle camo. The repeating side of the pattern is laid out so big, that it still looks like a non-repeating pattern. That's the part I really like.

Are there any spiritual ideas of the alps buried into your artwork?

I draw a lot of old pagan European costumes the last years because they seem like time capsules of rites that the church didn't manage to erase. Those costumes strangely look similar to costumes you might find on the opposite side of the globe. On the other hand, I'm really interested in why certain religious or let's say spiritual symbols look the way they do and what they symbolize. I was born in the western side of the Dolomites in a place where many cultures traveled, met each other, and left their marks, so I think I'm somehow affected by this subconscious conditioning of understanding what drove people and their art forms in the surroundings where I grew up.

Has your art ended up in any interesting/unexpected places?

I recently painted the 2nd floor of an ICU of Tirol Kliniken. The painting was a request of the head nurse of that floor, she called me up and asked me if I could color or better their work environment and they would pay me out of their pockets. That felt really humbling. Another funny story: I painted an old, wrinkled man's face six-years ago. Three-years later I got a mail from the owner of a wall that directly faces the wall with the old guy. The mail goes like this: “Dear Lukas Goller! I was forced by my family and my neighbors to ask you if you could paint a women's face on our wall to create balance with the old guy we are seeing every day.”

You’ve done a lot of massive wall pieces, but also smaller items like a Swatch watch, bottles of wine, and grocery packaging. How does your approach differ for each?

I work for a bio farmers' cooperative doing labels for their vegetables, cheeses, milk, wine, etc. That's my bill payer let's say, but it is humbling work because the cooperative is still owned by the farmers. This is basically just work, although I'm learning lots on how plants grow and why they look the way they look. I worked in fashion doing outerwear for about 5-years. That was more challenging due to the responsibility of not wasting prime materials by creating mundane designs. The skateboarding and snowboarding artworks I do represents the part of my art that is more free and the one where I don't have any constraints. Working with Wolle Nyvelt for Aesmo was a blast the last couple of years. Walls are the most fun to do because there is a social interaction part to it with whoever is walking by. That's priceless. Painting walls have a big hidden preparation aspect to it, but once you have a plan on how to do it up to scale, it is simpler than the tiny ink art pieces I do normally.

Do you prefer to work in color or black and white?

I prefer the black and white because I think it activates the imagination of the viewer more deeply. But at the same time colors are difficult when it comes to art pieces for me. I'm still in the learning curve.

What is it about making art for snowboarding / skateboarding that you love?

You don't have to compete in any paradigm, you just can create your own.

Does creating art feel like it gives meaning to life?

If it can affect the viewer in any way, then he gives it the meaning he likes. Positive or negative in the same way.

THERMAGRAPH®

Strategic body-mapped insulation and breathability developed around your body in motion to increase the versatility of your outerwear. Thermagraph® places separate zones of insulation and breathability strategically throughout your jacket or pants.

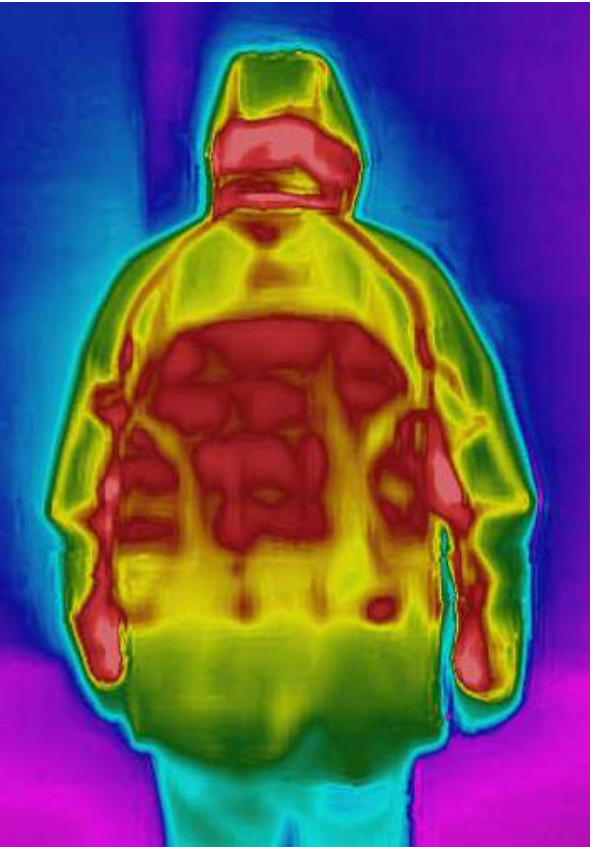

Insulation zones are placed where your body needs warmth the most - your vital organs, spine, knees, and seat are surrounded by breathable, moisture wicking mesh to allow for the utmost moisture evaporation and body temperature regulation. These zones work together to create an ultra-lightweight, warm, and highly breathable lining that adapts to you throughout changing conditions and perspiration levels.

ALPHA THERMAGRAPH®

U.S Special Forces spec'd Polartec® Alpha® insulation panels are taped to GORE-TEX PRO most-durable fabric to the highest GORE-TEX standards. The result is a combination of 3-layer breathability, regulated warmth, and moisture management in a rugged and durable package for true resort-to-backcountry usage.

Featured In:

GORE-TEX Pro 3L Thermagraph® Jacket
GORE-TEX PRO 3I Thermagraph® Bib

DOWN THERMAGRAPH®

600 Fill Power 80/20 100% Responsible Down weight less and has a higher Clo Value than our Recycled Poly Insulation. The combination of these Down panels inside 2-Layer GORE-TEX shell material results in an elevated experience requiring less layers and increasing mobility in colder temps, while allowing for a jacket that adapts well to increased perspiration while boot packing or during spring skiing & snowboarding.

Featured In:

GORE-TEX Hydra Down Thermagraph® Jacket11

RECYCLED POLY THERMAGRAPH®

Our original Thermagraph® design is still the choice the 686 pro team as well as thousands of skiers and snowboarders across the globe. 140g 85% Recycled Insulation panels and open cell mesh create the perfect combination of warmth and breathability to keep riders going from sub-zero to spring time and from park to powder.

IRON MAIDEN

The logo features the band's name in a stylized, jagged font. To the right of the name is a red square containing the number '686' in white, with a small floral emblem below it.

EDDIE TAKES A TRIP TO THE SNOW

A soundtrack to so many influential video parts in snowboarding and skiing over the years, Iron Maiden and their iconic music and art seemingly need little introduction. The capsule brings inspiration of classic Iron Maiden fan attire, utilizing denim and bleached looking fabrics – available exclusively in a palette of black mixed with classic “Killers” album art featuring their famed mascot Eddie.

KEITH HARING

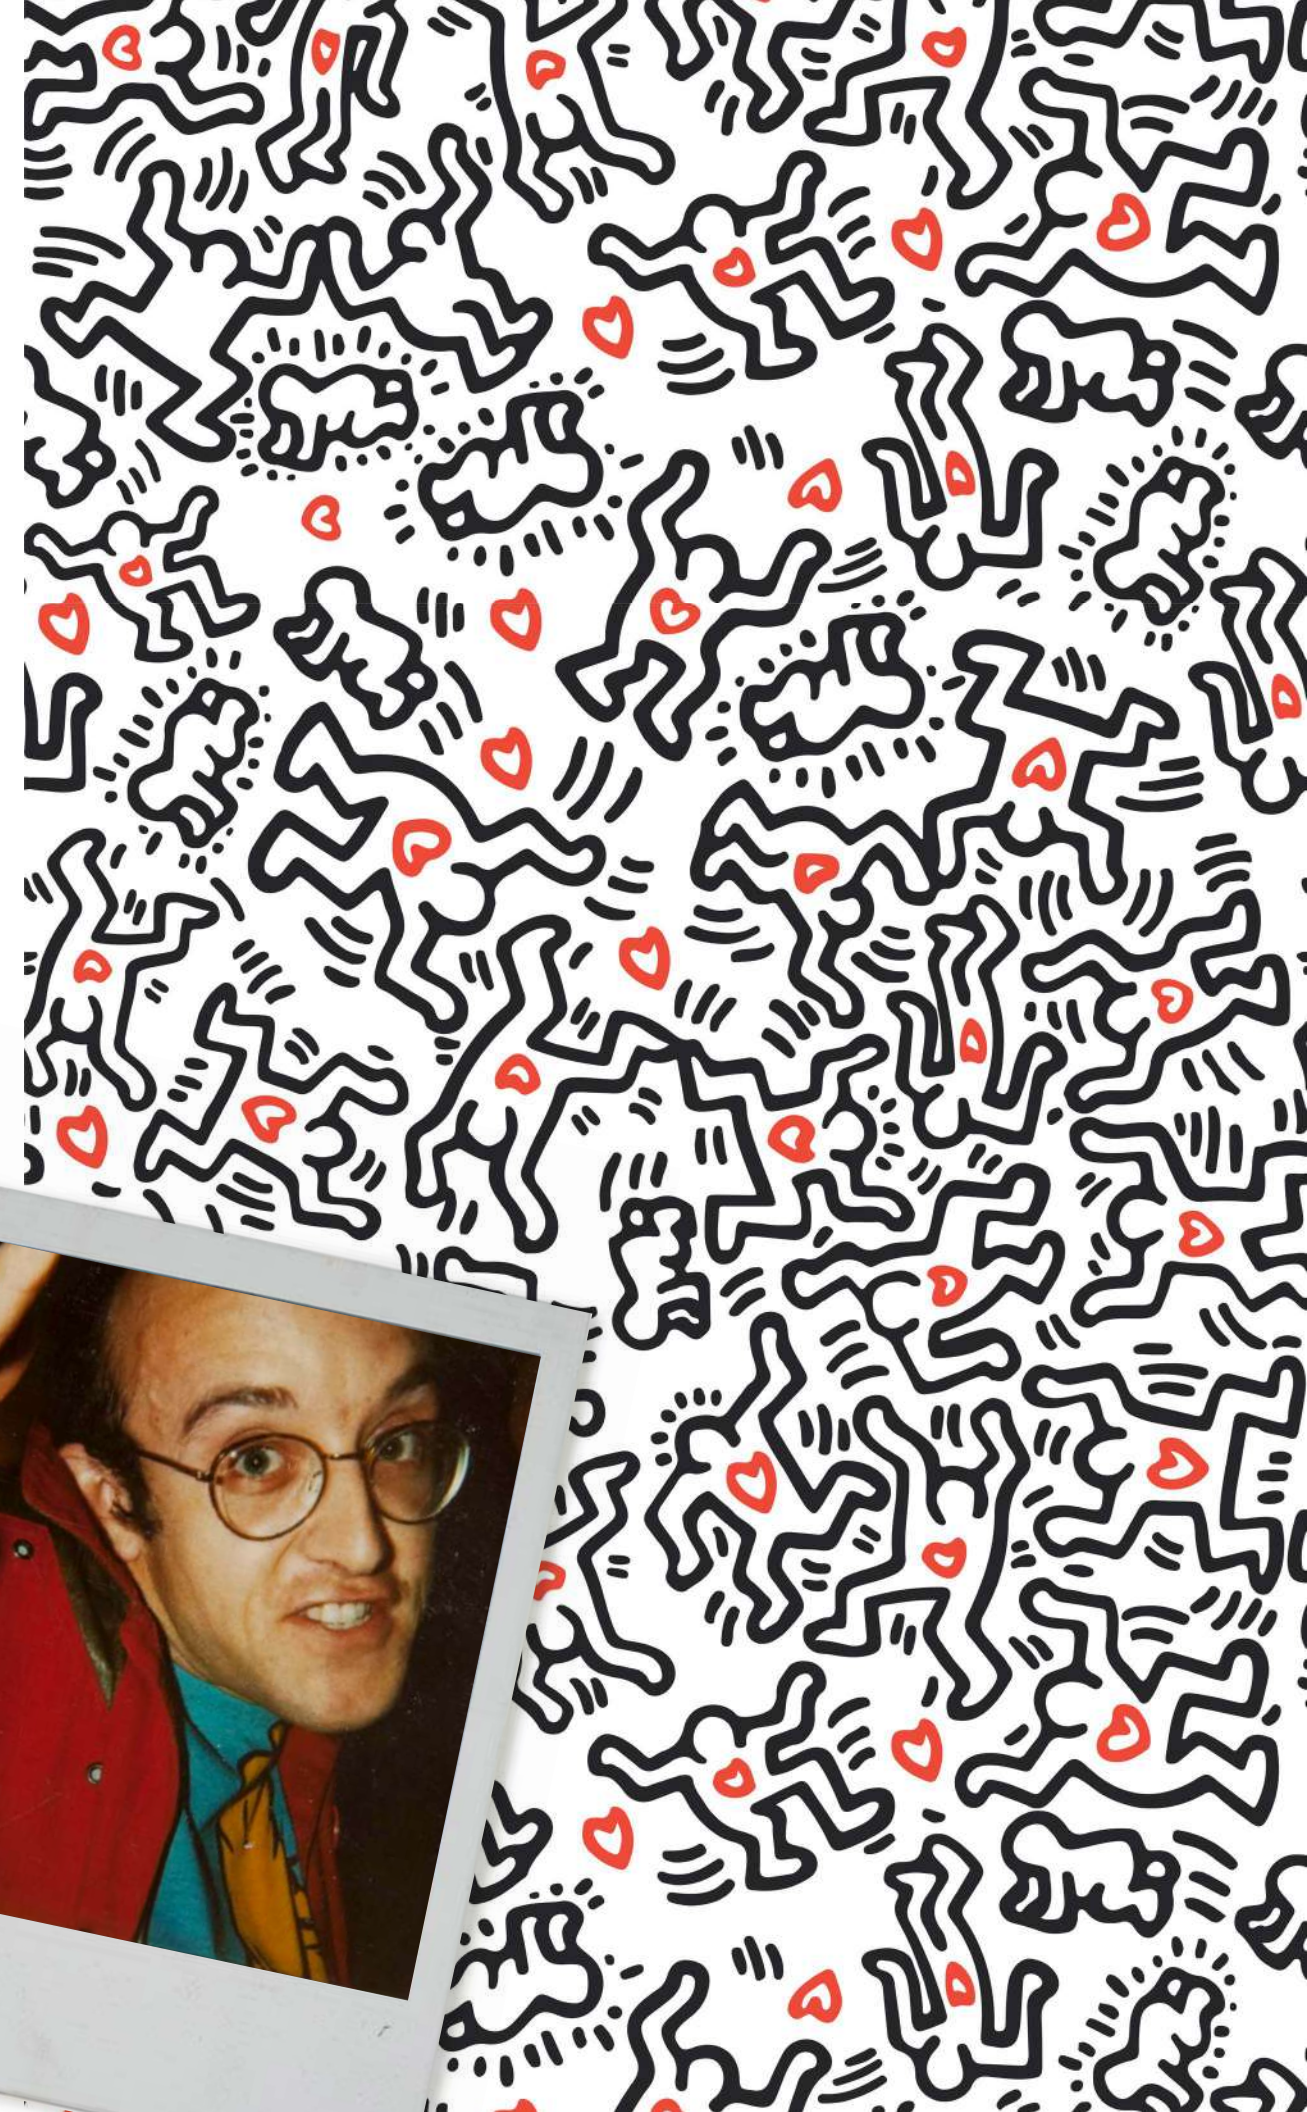

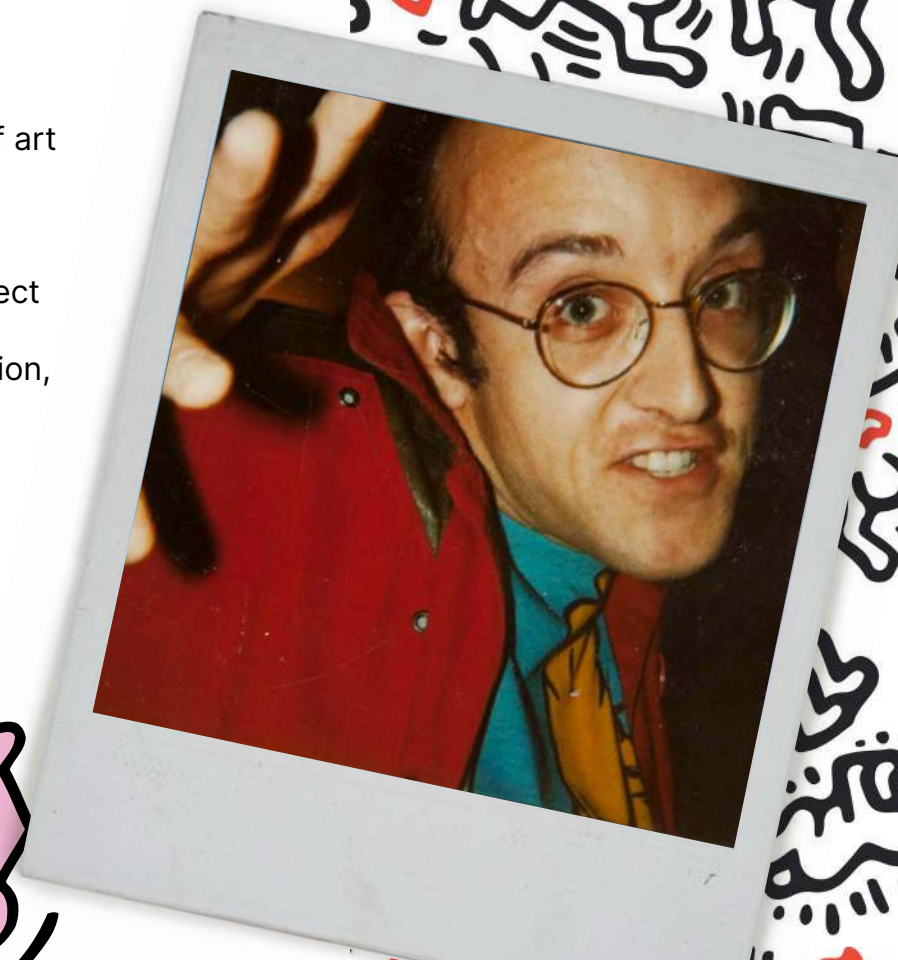

Art For Everybody

Keith Haring personified the statement, "Be different — always." Nothing about Haring and his art fit the mold of the average American in the 1970's & 80's. His graffiti was atypical, and he bypassed the traditionally gallery scene and instead found his audience along the subway lines. At the height of selling his work to the elite collectors, he opened The Pop Shop – a place where everyone had access to forms of his art.

Similarly, to how our approach to apparel invites conversation and we aim to provide a home for all freethinkers, Haring's graffiti created its own dialogue with users and he strove to provide "art for everybody". Harings drawings were as much performance as they were graffiti and he invited commentary and confrontation from those passing by. Through it all, Haring and his work was inclusive, energetic and became a form of activism as he used his platform for those who's voices couldn't carry as far. He has inspired generations of artists including our own Forest Bailey.

The 686 x Keith Haring collection puts famous Haring works around love and community front and center via iconic drawings and colorations created in men's and women's styles and sizing. From waterproof jackets to collectable beanies, we continue Haring's vision of art as culture that can be bought by most.

Our collaboration is with the Keith Haring Studio, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Keith Haring Foundation. The Keith Haring Foundation's mission is to sustain, expand, and protect the legacy of Keith Haring, his art, and his ideals. The Foundation supports not-for-profit organizations that assist children, as well as organizations involved in education, prevention, and care related to AIDS.

WELCOME 686

All Are Welcome

Our lives are flooded with video and photo imagery everyday – tiktok, Instagram, what's next, who's going higher, faster, futher... Welcome Skateboards approach to skateboarding cuts through the noise – their blend of DIY ethos, quirky aesthetic focus, experimentation and gender positive shapes and apparel drives home a perspective that resonates at the core with 686.

Welcome's humble DIY roots, independent ownership, small internal team of passionate "professionals" innovation through product and acceptance for the non-conformist mirror that of 686's in so many ways. In fact, our creed since day one has stated that we provide a home for freethinkers and we ensure all are "welcome."

The Welcome skate team has a passion for snow, our snow team has a passion for skateboarding – and so with this shared mindspace, we set forth on a path towards this unlikely combination.

The capsule is sized in typical "men's sizing" but is created as a single unifying flag to be worn by all – from Mia to Nora to Waino and Townley – those who bring a progressive vision to snow. All graphics are custom created by Welcome Founder and Illustrator Jason Ceyala for this project. Welcome created the colorways and 686 applied the fits, innovations and technologies to the capsule.

Introducing Welcome x 686 - A collection that is more about the feeling of the trick than the amount of rotations the board goes through...

Sub-Zero Hi PrimaLoft® Hooded Jacket

A versatile puffer that is team tested in climates across the globe and sustainably designed with Reclaimed fabrics and Responsible Down insulation.

A man and a woman are shown from the waist up, wearing black, quilted, down-filled jackets. The man on the left is wearing a black jacket with a high collar and a small white logo on the chest. The woman on the right is wearing a similar black jacket with a high collar. Both are wearing olive green cargo pants. The background is plain white.

UNWORK

SINCE

DURABLE CLOTHES
FOR EVERYWHERE

1992

IT'S NOT JUST WORKWEAR.

We love traditional workwear; however, it tends to run on linear lines or fits safely into boxes. We agree on the sacred foundations like durability and utility, and salute those who shape our world with daily labor. But as workers—and humans—we need more. Different is in our DNA.

Unwork is our progressive take on classic workwear, constructed with 686's most durable fabrications to date. The world we move in requires more mobility, breathability, and a flexibility not seen in modern workwear.

We crafted a pant that seamlessly travels between classic work environments—the sawdust, the dirt, the sweat—and our individual passions beyond work. It needs unrestricted movement beyond the Business Days, and a healthy thirst for the lifestyle that begins when work ends.

Blur the lines between work and play. Blend the inner fire and the outdoor. Destroy barriers. Unwork.

Autumn Headwear has built a worldwide community around product, passion and progression in both the mountains and the cities across the globe. With their attention to fit, detail and color, it's no wonder that their beanies have become a favorite across our team of skiers and snowboarders too. With so many shared athletes and a mutual admiration of each other's independent owner/operator stories, it only made sense to embark on a path together. Introducing the Winter 2024 686 Headwear collection – designed in it's entirety by Autumn Headwear.

Whether deep in the backcountry, on resort, in the outdoors or in the city, 686 x Autumn beanies are our flags - showcasing our individuality to the world and inviting conversation and friendships along the way.

Thank you Autumn

The image displays two Gore-Tex gloves against a plain white background. The glove on the left is made of black leather with a textured surface and a black fabric wristband. It features a small red and black Gore-Tex logo patch on the wristband. The glove on the right is a synthetic material, primarily maroon with black accents on the palm, fingers, and wristband. It has a black drawstring closure at the wrist and a black Gore-Tex logo patch on the back of the hand. Both gloves have a black cord attached to the wristband.

HOW TO MEASURE

NECK

Measure around the base of the neck, where the shirt collar is usually fastened.

CHEST

Measure at the widest point of the chest under the armpits and make sure the tape is straight and taut in back as well.

ARM LENGTH

Measure from the center of the back of your neck, then across the top of your shoulder and down the length of your arm to wrist.

LOW WAIST

Measure 1.5 inches lower than your natural waistline.
